Members calling in their jobs is the primary way our Guild and business representatives stay current on work in progress. There is no other reporting procedure that keeps them up to date. If you're on a union job and having problems with issues like safety, staffing, turn-around or payroll, and you need assistance from our business reps, it helps considerably if they are familiar with your job and the members working on it. Help the Guild help you by calling in your job.

Don't assume you are under contract. Reporting your job is the only way to make certain that you get the correct rate, and that you're receiving contributions to our health and pension plans. - Barry Wetcher, Still Photographer

Empower the Union

Calling in your job is the best way to strengthen our union. The only way they can help is when they know that you are working. When you start a shoot, call it in.
